

24th January 2019

The mission of the Department of Anatomy in the Yong Loo Lin School of Medicine, National University of Singapore is to be an active partner in the University's effort to excel in teaching and research, and to contribute to the training of competent and caring doctors and other healthcare professionals for the nation.

Position

Candidates are invited to apply for the position of (1) Research Assistant; (2) Research Fellow to examine the roles of glycosaminoglycans and proteoglycans in cancer biology.

Job Requirements

The candidate should have:

- At least a BSc in Biomedical Science / Life Science or related fields with good results for Position 1, or a PhD for Position 2
- Ability to work both independently and as a team in an exciting research environment
- Willingness to learn
- Excellent organisational skills and meticulousness
- Good interpersonal and communication skills
- Prior research experience in cell culture, immunohistochemistry and molecular biology will be an advantage

Job Scope

- Carry out research projects
- Assist in the management and maintenance of daily laboratory operations

The successful applicant will work in a challenging environment and be actively involved in clinically important research projects. Remuneration will commensurate with relevant qualifications and experience. Contract is renewable annually based on satisfactory performance.

Contact

Interested applicants are to complete and submit the accompanying application form together with (a) detailed CV, (b) copies of full transcripts / certificates, (c) three letters of reference, and (d) other supporting documents. Only short listed candidates will be notified.

Associate Professor George Yip
Department of Anatomy
Yong Loo Lin School of Medicine
National University of Singapore
4 Medical Drive, Block MD 10
Singapore 117594

E-mail: georgeyip@nus.edu.sg