6th SMEC Workshop on: LONG AND INTERMEDIATE CARE FOR PATIENTS

21 August 2010 (Saturday), 11.20am-1.00pm
Seminar Rooms 4A&4D and Seminar Room 5

The concept of intermediate and long-term care is probably foreign to most Singaporeans. What we know of and are probably familiar with is that of acute hospital care. There are differences with regards to services available and treatment approaches when comparing the two. It must also be made known the GP clinics are not well equipped for treating such patients. For intermediate and long-term care, there is a functional assessment to determine which patients fall into the category.

This workshop will seek to explain the differences between the 2 forms of care stated above, how patients are identified, structure of the community care in Singapore, facilities available, what can be improved on, and who are the people involved.
