

Asian Bioethics Colloquium (ABC): Inaugural Meeting

Sunday, 8th February 2015 (lunchtime) - Tuesday 10th February 2015 (lunchtime)

at

National University of Singapore (meeting location to be confirmed)

The basic aim of the ABC is career development of early career bioethics scholars in Asia. This aim will be met by having all the papers delivered at the Colloquium authored by such scholars (for example by PhD candidates or junior academics). The role of the senior scholars attending will be mentoring, feedback and detailed advice on how to achieve publication in high quality journals. Asian Bioethics Review will be one outlet for publication, subject to normal peer review.

The Colloquium is a collaboration between several academic bioethics centres in Asia. This inaugural meeting is being hosted by the Centre of Biomedical Ethics, NUS. Future meetings will be held in other centres in Asia. Scholarships will be provided for junior scholars whose papers have been accepted. Senior scholars will be asked to find their own funding if possible. Costs will be kept to a minimum.
