

IMPROVING THE QUALITY OF CLINICAL EDUCATION FOR STUDENTS AND CLINICIANS

Jillian Brammer

Many clinicians believe that students will learn in the clinical setting if the clinician teaches them about their profession. This interactive workshop will explore nature of clinical education to identify current practices, share experiences and showcase some innovative approaches. A variety of strategies will be used to raise the awareness and highlight factors other than teaching strategies that influence the quality of learning in the clinical setting from the perspective of both students and clinicians.
